Be Heard Harrisonburg

Harrisonburg, VA – The City of Harrisonburg is opening another line of communication with members of the community.

“Be Heard Harrisonburg” is a new platform that the city has launched to open discussions on projects, develop informal surveys, and collect ideas from residents through an easy-to-use interface. This resource will also facilitate dialogue between community members.

“This innovative tool provides another way for the City of Harrisonburg to listen and hear from our community members,” said Mary-Hope Vass, Public Information Officer.

Different segments of Harrisonburg’s population already engage and interact with local government. The city strives to provide a variety of resources to the community in order to make available relevant information and data and encourage more citizen participation.

The first project to be featured on this site is the Park View Water Tank project.

Staff members will monitor the site, answer questions, and provide feedback online. In addition to community members providing ideas, city-related projects will also be posted for comments and discussions.
